CHINA HALL TO BE HOME FOR AGED; OPENS MONDAY

Ceremonies to Mark Dedication of Mansion as Institution

WAS ERECTED IN 1787

Mayor Mackey to Furnish Room Dedicated To Philadelphia

CROYDON, June 13.—Monday will mark the opening of historic China Hall as a home for aged couples. George W. Wilkins, owner of the property, founder of the Galilee Mission and superintendent of the Shelter Home, 18th and Hamilton streets, has made the home possible. One of the finest rooms in the building, the old ballroom, will be dedicated to the City of Philadelphia, in honor of Mayor H. Mackey, who is supplying the furnishings.

The dedication address will be delivered by Bishop Francis M. Taitt, of the Protestant Episcopal Church. An all-day picnic will be the feature of the formal opening, luncheon being served immediately after the dedication and the afternoon devoted to outdoor games and sports.

The three-story house of frame and old-English brick construction dates back to 1787 and stands on land which once belonged to William Penn, the younger. In 1796 this estate came into the possession of a Dutch gentleman, Andreas Everardus van Brasm Houckwest, whose son, Robert, according to tradition, was the first to carry the American flag to China.

Houckwest was a man of the sea who had settled in Philadelphia and Bucks County. The son brought back pieces of china and curios from that land, from which the mansion afterward took its name.

Two tall pines, one planted by Washington and the other by Lafayette, formerly stood sentinels before the house, but five years ago the tree planted by the first President was struck by lightning. A flagpole now marks the spot, and a part of the trunk has been preserved within the house by Mr. Wilkins.

The house also boasts two underground passages, one to the river and the other to the garden. One of these is still open, but the other has become blocked.

The rooms on the ground floor are more than seventeen feet in height and one, the ballroom, measures forty-seven feet by twenty-eight in size. The rooms on the second floor are slightly lower but are of unusual height and spaciousness. Eight fire-places constituted the original heating system, and a fifty-loaf capacity bake oven and two ancient wine coolers, fashioned of solid marble, were items which once figured largely in the hall's hospitality.

Since Mr. Wilkins came into possession of the place some fifteen years ago, he has expended substantial sums on maintenance and restoration.

YOUTHS, ARRESTED AS HOBOES, BEING HELD FOR ROBBERY; CONFESS STEALING AT FALLSINGTON

MORRISVILLE, June 13.—Arrested as hoboes as they were sitting on the bank of the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks at Fallsington yesterday afternoon, two Cleveland, O., youths, one 19 years old and the other 20, later confessed to Morrisville State Police that they broke into a Fallsington grocery store and stole $50 worth of merchandise.

The robbery at the store of Abraham Servin, on the Lincoln Highway at Main street, was discovered by the proprietor when he opened the establishment for business yesterday morning. The intruders entered during the night, breaking the front door lock, and escaped with groceries, cigarettes and other goods.

The youths gave their names as Robert Starrow, 19 years old, of 74 Quinton avenue, and Walter Kardillo, town in default of $1,000 bail each.

Cupid Wins in Baby Wrangle

AUTO CRASH RESULTS IN INJURIES TO THREE

Frank Stone, New York City, Has Possible Fracture of Skull

ONE MAN IS HELD

LANGHORNE, June 13.—Three persons were seriously injured in a head-on crash of two automobiles on the Lincoln Highway at the Street Road, at 6:30 o'clock last night.

Frank Stone, 29 years old, of 554 West 33d street, New York City, suffered the worst injuries. He is in the Frankford Hospital, Philadelphia, with a possible fracture of the skull, deep lacerations of the scalp, a possible fracture of the left shoulder and abrasions. He was rendered unconscious by the mishap but was later revived.

The others are Edward Broedel, 36 years old, of Lynnbrook, L. I., who suffered a fractured left arm, lacerations of the left side, four fractured ribs and laceration of the face, and Harry Levi, of 554 West 33d Street, New York, who received fractures of the right arm and wrist and lacerations of the forehead and scalp. They are also in the Frankford Hospital.

Levi was traveling toward Philadelphia with Stone, when, police say, he lost control of his car, swerved across the highway and crashed head-on into Broedel's car. The fronts of both machines were telescoped.

Broedel, a salesman, told Highway Patrolman Dean of Langhorne, that he was traveling at about 35 miles an hour when he saw the other car swerve toward him. He said he made a desperate effort, but was unable to get out of its path. His car was upset and he was pinned beneath it.

The injured men were rushed to the Byberry Emergency Hospital for first-aid treatment and were then removed to the hospital in Philadelphia. Police say Levi will be detained pending the outcome of the injuries of the other two men.

JAMES P. HELLINGS DIES AT AGE OF 82; WAS COURT CRIER

Middletown Township Republican Had Host of Friends In the County

IN OFFICE MANY YEARS

Was Known to Thousands Throughout Bucks County

James P. Hellings, crier in the Bucks County court at Doylestown for the past ten years, is dead.

Death of this well-known Bucks County Republican occurred late last night, following a lengthy illness at his home, Middletown Township, about five miles from Bristol. He was 82 years of age.

Mr. Hellings, known to thousands through his fraternal and political connections, had had a long and most active life—serving in the capacities of constable, tipstave, court crier, tax collector, assessor, road inspector, and in various fraternal offices throughout his four-score and two years. His political career began when he was but 19 years of age.

Mr. Hellings' first appointment as court crier was made in April of 1921 and his last appointment was shortly after the first of this year. He had been unable to attend to his duties for the past few months owing to a lengthy illness. His work of tip-stave in the county courts began during the regime of the late Judge Richard Watson.

For 45 years he served as assessor of Middletown township, ceasing this work in 1924. In that year he also relinquished his position as tax collector, after serving as such for a period of 28 years. He was road inspector in 1907, having under his jurisdiction three miles of roadways. The work of constable required his attention for half a century, which duties he began in 1878.

Men active in fraternal circles knew "Jim" as he was called, the deceased having been connected with the I. O. O. F. for more than 60 years. He was affiliated with Neshaminy Lodge, 422, of Hulmeville. He had also been connected with the Odd Fellows' Encampment which has been disbanded; and was a member of the Veterans Odd Fellows Association. He was a most faithful attendant upon the sessions of the fraternal organizations with which he was affiliated. He was also a member of Past Grands Association, I. O. O. F. of Southeastern Pennsylvania; Eden Council, 988, Independent Order of Americans; Red Men, South Langhorne; Wild Rose Rebekah Lodge, 246, Hulmeville; Friendship Lodge, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, South Langhorne.

James P. Hellings obtained a common school education but the better part of his education was obtained through actual business experience. He remained at home until 22 years of age, when he went to Bensalem township, but, in 1872, he moved back to Middletown township and was engaged in various business enterprises. In 1883, he moved to his mother's place which he later purchased. He had always been connected with public affairs and was one of the leaders of the Republican party in the community. He served as a delegate to the congressional convention at Newtown. Mr. Hellings was an active and influential politician, always working for the advancement of his party, and was widely known throughout the county as a leader and a man of many sterling qualities.

On October 1, 1870, he was married to Mary E. Keen, a native of Bensalem Township, daughter of Samuel and Rebecca Mood Keen. Five daughters were born to them. Mr. Hellings' wife died a number of years ago. Four daughters survive: Mrs. Uwell Miller, Middletown Township; Mrs. Joseph Clayton and Mrs. Marian Reed, of South Langhorne; and Mrs. Mary Hellyer, of Doylestown.

The deceased was a member of Neshaminy M. E. Church, Hulmeville. Funeral service will be held at the home of the deceased, Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. Burial will be made in Beechwood Cemetery.

FLAG DAY

Although you may never think much about it, the fact is you often forget three of your greatest bene factors.

First, your city: Well, the city educates you, sends engines to put out the flames if your house is on fire; city police try to protect you from thieves. All this and much more.

Then, your state: You travel in safety over fine roads built over mountains; you may if you please enroll as a student in a college kept open by the state; under her friendly laws if you are injured at your work you will be recompensed.

And finally your nation: If you travel in China, and bandits seize you, the United States will send a man-of-war over the ocean to demand your release. And if you are lost in the heart of Africa, the president will call on the navy to steam 3,000 miles, send ashore the active young men called soldiers of the sea, who will travel for days through swamps and deserts, finally open the door of your prison where the black savages hold you; then bring you back to your native land—all without price, all because you are a citizen of the United States of America.

This day, salute the flag and be glad that you are born in the land of the free and the home of the brave.

You are a busy man, too busy for your own good. But you ought to have these things called to your attention.

Next to your father and your mother, respect and cherish your city, your state and your nation—and the flag is the symbol of all three.

TYPICAL FAMILY

The "typical American family" has been discovered in Indiana by a magazine and advertised to the world as the genuine thing. And there hangs another controversy that may rival that which for months raged around the "average man" and those which Sinclair Lewis started with his Main street, Babbitt and Elmer Gantry.

The "typical family" was chosen according to standards and measurements embodied in a composite picture formed by the definitions of a "typical family" given by 336 telephone subscribers listed under such prosaically American names as Smith, Brown, Jones, Taylor, and so forth.

To be typically American, therefore, a family must consist of a salesman of 44 with a wife five years his junior and two children, and a home with spica growing in front.

That would not have described the typical American home of two or three generations ago when large families predominated and couples having only two children were suspected of promoting race suicide.

If a family of four is representative, then the country is headed for a decline in population, experts having determined that an average of three and a fraction children to the family is needed to maintain a stable population.

It doubtless required years to find the man who looks so perfectly at ease in a union-suit ad.

"MAKE-BELIEVE" by FAITH BALDWIN

Copyright, 1930, by Faith Baldwin

Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Thrown upon her own resources, Mary Lou Thurston, beautiful and vivacious orphan, applies for a position as companion to a semi-invalid in the paternal home of Mrs. Lorrimer at Westmill, Connecticut. Mrs. Lorrimer explains the ad should have read "male" as the invalid is her son, Travers, shell-shocked in the war. As Mary Lou is about to leave, Travers enters. He seizes her in his arms, calling her "Delight" and "wife." Then he faints when Mary Lou fails to respond to his caresses. Mrs. Lorrimer persuades Mary Lou to assume the role of Delight Harford, whom Travers claims he married in England, in order to help him regain his health. Mary Lou confides in her friend, Larry Mitchell, young newspaper reporter.

CHAPTER XIV.

SHE found stamps, plenty of them, even 5-cent and special deliveries, for Mrs. Lorrimer had not been idle in procuring her new "daughter" with everything for convenience and comfort. She stamped and addressed the envelope, and presently Hilda knocked at the door to say that Mrs. Lorrimer expected her for tea. "In the morning room, Miss Delight," said Hilda, without a quiver of her eyelash.

Going downstairs, Mary Lou found herself speculating upon her new name. She thought, ruefully: "It doesn't suit me. I should be blond and willowy and perhaps a little clinging. Mary Lou belongs. Maybe because I've had it so long. But it's up to me to forget it ever had it. I can't play at being Delight Harford unless I make myself believe I am!" she thought further.

Mrs. Lorrimer evidently thought so, too.

"No more Mary Lou," she said. "You'll have to get used to the other name. It is necessary, you know. How many lumps, Delight?" asked Mrs. Lorrimer, with perfect gravity.

Mary Lou laughed and then sighed.

Just a Friend

"It is an undertaking," she admitted. "It won't be so hard for you, of course. After all, you didn't know Mary Lou very long or well, but I have known her for 20 years! I wrote Larry and explained everything after I called him up. He'll go down and get my things for me," she went on, "and does the mail go out tonight?"

"I'll have it sent right to the post-office. Tell me," asked Mrs. Lorrimer, "does this engaging young man—I am sure he is, from your earlier description—does he complicate things?"

"Complicate things?" asked Mary Lou, blankly.

"I mean, are you engaged? You must forgive me, my dear; I don't mean to be personal or curious. But we had better understand one another. For if you are, it may be difficult—he may object. This there is Travers to consider. I had forgotten about this Mr. Mitchell until you spoke of telephoning him and taking him into your confidence. And I wonder if any young man would consent to his fiancee playing such a role as you have undertaken."

Mary Lou shook her shining copper-colored curla vigorously, naively.

"We're just awfully good friends," she answered. "I think he'll help us all he can. You said he might come to see me and bring me news from home?" she asked, and as Mrs. Lorrimer nodded, "What more natural than for her to think that you were dead? Then, when the war was over, you were sent straight home, still an invalid from your crash, without an opportunity to go to London and find her. You wrote to the old address after your return. She had moved away. Convinced of your death, she did not try to trace you further. Try to think of her, instead of yourself. It is impossible for her to begin where you two left off. Impossible! But she is here, under your roof. Your mother has accepted her. But you must try and make the adjustment easy for her. Begin, as I told you, at the beginning, with friendship. Come to know one another. I know it is a difficult situation but a lot of it is up to you. I trust you to see it through—clearly. Honorably."

After a moment Travers held out his hand.

"All right, Doc," he said.

Mathews rose, and stood looking down at him, relieved and hopeful of the success of his arguments. He had, he knew, Lorrimer's word.

"Do you want to see her now?" he asked gently.

Lorrimer moved his head on the pillow. He was suddenly very nervous; his hands clenched on the bedclothes.

"No. No—tomorrow," he said. "I've got to think this out. I've some adjusting to do, myself." He tried to smile. "Thanks a lot, Doc. Sorry I was such an ass as to keel over. I'm a fine wreck of a man," he went on bitterly, "to dream that any girl, after seeing me . . ." He broke off. Then he said, very gently, rather pitifully, "Please give her my love."

When Mathews had left him he lay a long time thinking, trying to see, as Mathews had asked, the situation clearly. He understood all the implications. But he didn't want to see her tonight, not till he had gotten a grip on himself. It had all been so amazingly sudden. The unexpectedness of it. He'd walked into the room, listless, bored with life, as usual, unhappy and—had seen her. The recognition had been immediate.

Joy and Disappointment

The deep joy and gratitude, the soaring ecstasy which had overwhelmed him had been almost too much to bear. But she'd shrunk from him, looked upon him as if he had been a stranger, a madman. She had not spoken to him, had not even called him by name. And the resultant crushing disappointment, the doubt of her loyalty, the conviction that she'd forgotten vows, embraces, promises, the certainty of her revulsion, had completely broken him.

Now that he had, through Mathews, a plausible explanation for her incredible attitude, her amazing behavior, he was beginning to see the equal, if different, shock the situation had been to her. And so he must adjust himself. But he couldn't see her—tonight. Helpless, wretched, he felt that his world, even his dull, lifeless world of the past years, was turned upside down. And too great, too sudden joy, followed immediately by devastating disappointment, terror and doubt, had completely unsettled his never-steady nerves. Tomorrow, then?

He did try to trace you. But he was ill some time after you left for France. You wrote her, you told me, one letter on your return to the front. She never received it nor the letters you were able to send from prison camp. Remember, you were reported missing," he went on and Travers nodded.

"She didn't try to trace me," stated rather than asked the other man. "That proves what you said—she'd forgotten. And it proves what I said—that she no longer cares."

"She didn't try to trace me," asked the other man. "That proves what you said—she'd forgotten. And it proves what I said—that she no longer cares."

The blast was quite satisfactory in every detail.

Under expert supervision the explosive was so arranged to produce only a minimum of vibration or concussion. The vibration was carefully checked and tests show that the giant blast had no more effect upon surrounding property than the discharge of a single piece of dynamite in the open quarry would have had.

Among the testing devices were 4 groups of 12 small bars of metal one-fourth inch in diameter and ranging in length from 4 to 16 inches. These were set on end in four different places at various distances from the scene of the blast.

In the office at the quarry and in one of the dwellings across the railroad from the quarry not one of the bars fell. Two hundred feet from the quarry 6 of the 12 exploded over and 1160 feet from the quarry in the same direction one of the twelve fell.

A. O. H. Team Opens Series Of Baseball Games Sunday

By T. M. JUNO

"Chippie" Valentine, the former catcher of the first ward team of the Bristol league years ago, will be seen in action tomorrow on Sullivan's field when he brings his Colored All-Stars of Burlington here to play the A. O. H. team.

Valentine was a long-distance clouter in his Bristol days as a batter and many local fans will be pleased to see him in action again after a long absence.

It is probable that Gene Lawler will be the Hibernians' twirler with Brady behind the plate. The rest on the line-up will include: Leyden, Roe, Thompson, Dugan, McCafferty, McGinley and Ennis.

TELEPHONE*OLDSMOBILE'S NEW quiet SECOND GEAR GIVES A new KIND OF ACCELERATION*SWIFT • SMOOTH • QUIET

You can't appreciate how much a really quiet second gear adds to driving enjoyment until you take the wheel and try the new Oldsmobile ♦ ♦ For this feature, one of many important new ones now offered in Oldsmobile, gives a new kind of acceleration. It is unusually swift, to give you the lead in traffic. It is remarkably smooth, to give added zest to fast getaway. And it is almost unbelievably noise-free—actually rivaling high-gear performance in quietness ♦ ♦ These unusual advantages of Oldsmobile's new Quiet Second Gear are given the highest possible degree of utility by the famous Syncro-Mesh transmission. This feature enables you to shift smoothly and easily through all gears without clashing. And this applies not only to the shifts from low into second and from second to high, but also to the change from high back to second. This shift . . . so difficult with the ordinary transmission, and so useful for a quick burst of speed in traffic . . . can be made easily and silently, without reducing car speed ♦ ♦ The new Oldsmobile is a great car to drive for many reasons. And not the least of these is its new Quiet Second Gear—transforming Oldsmobile's smooth, increased power into keen, fast, quiet acceleration . . . and contributing new pleasure—new satisfaction—to driving.

SPORTSEMILIE SECURES ITS FIRST LEAGUE VICTORY

By T. M. Juno

EMILIE, June 13.—Emilie Y. M. A. won its first victory of the Bristol Twilight League here last night when it barely nosed out the St. Ann's team by the score of 2 to 1.

After being blanked for six frames by the sturdy arm of "Ike" Watson, the St. Ann's boys went to work in the last inning and put across their only tally and should have had two or three more.

Oriola first batter in the seventh singled to center; Whyno bunted down the third base line and Hibbs fumbled; Angelo was sent in to run for Oriola; Seneca batted for Niccols and delivered a long hit to center, Angelo scoring; Whyno reaching third and Seneca second on the throw-in. The stage was all set for a squeeze play, but Whyno on third did not catch the signal and when DiTanna laid down a wonderful bunt down the third base line he (Whyno) was too late starting for the plate and was out, Watson to Bruce; Fields lined to Watson and Hibbs threw out Gilardi.

Emilie put a run across in the second frame. Bruce rolled an easy one to Whyno who fumbled; Bruce stole second and continued to third on Oriola's wild peg; Still fanned; Praul singled to left and Bruce counted; L. Hibbs fanned and Tranotti went out, DeRisi to Whyno.

With two out in the sixth Emilie put another run across on singles by Praul, Bruce and D. Still.

The fly-chasing of "Niggle" Brushia was the feature of the game. He caught five flies in center and three were spectacular.

UNAVOIDABLE ERROR

In the advertisement of the United Cut Rate, 127 Mill street, the advertisement for Bold, Havana Ribbon, Sabrosa, Cremo, and Rocky Ford cigars, yesterday the price was given as 90 cents, for box of 50, instead of $1.90. The advertisement was set correctly, but in transporting the forms from the composing room to the press room the figure 1 dropped out and was not noticed until about one-third of the Courier's circulation was off the press, when it was called to our attention by Mr. Levinson.
